Welcome to Wåndyr!

Wåndyr is an adventure game about a band of adventurers wandering through a pulp fantasy world. The focus is on exploration, following rumors, discovering new places, finding magic, treasure hunting, camping, singing, storytelling, cleverly overcoming impossible odds, and coming back alive with tales to tell. In the spirit of The Hobbit, Wåndyr celebrates the journey of going there and back again.

The stories and songs of your characters emerge during play, filled with wonder and surprises that even the Guide doesn't anticipate.

Sandbox

The Guide describes the world but doesn't create a story beforehand. The local area remains wide open and undefined, even if some aspects of the wider world are known. This "sandbox" style allows everyone at the table to discover the unexpected together.

The Guide uses dice rolls and random tables to determine what happens rather than telling a predetermined story. Each new discovery adds to the growing lore of your campaign world.

The Oracle

The Oracle answers any yes/no question instantly, often adding unexpected "sweet" or "spicy" flavor to keep adventures surprising. Both Guide and players consult the Oracle during play.

For deeper questions, the Oracle excels at "20 questions" to reveal mysteries piece by piece. The Guide should also use the random tables in the Wåndyr World Oracle.

Wåndyr is compatible with most Old School Roleplaying (OSR) games, but with fresh mechanics. Thus, the Guide has a wealth of material to augment the Oracle.

Starting a Game

Wândyr is a game played with friends. Select one person to be the Guide; the other people are players.

1 - Starting Location

The Guide describes the starting location for the adventure, such as a medieval tavern in a town on the borderlands. The Guide can place this into a larger fantasy world, or let that be a mystery for now.

2 - Create Characters

Each player needs three characters. A character has two Traits and two Skills, for example:

LINDON: BRAVE, STRONG | POLEAX, ARMOR

2 - Select a Rumor

The Guide then lists a few rumors that hint about troublesome events in the area or interesting places to explore. The players choose a rumor to follow.

3 - Muster a Character

Each player rolls 2d6 Hearts for each of their characters and chooses one to "Muster" (play). From now on, each player becomes their mustered character. The Guide gives new characters 1-4 basic "hand me down" items for weapons, armor, tools, spellbooks, etc.

4 - Pack for the Journey

The Guide should provide a landmark or general directions so the path of the journey is clear, and provide or suggest basic travel supplies (e.g. food, water, traveling cloak). Players can swap items amongst themselves, but must leave unnecessary items behind with their other characters.

5 - Embark

Start play on the road. Each player plays their mustered character; the Guide handles everything else.

Characters

Each character starts with two Traits and two Skills.

ROOK: AGILE THIEF | KNIFE, (LOCKPICKS)

Rook is played as an “agile thief” (Traits) and knows how to use a knife and secretly lockpicks (Skills).

Traits

A Trait is a keyword that describes how the character is played.

Each Trait must be a single word, or common compound word (e.g. “rat-catcher”, “horse-thief”). Traits can describe physical appearance, personality, quirks, habits, customs, idioms, approach to solving problems, etc. Traits can refer to a culture, homeland, or ancestry (human, elf, dwarf, etc.) or whatever helps the player paint a picture. Good Traits make the character fun and distinctive to play.

Skills

A Skill is something the character has learned, either an item proficiency or a knowledge.

Examples: dagger, longsword, bow, lockpicks, shield, armor, type of animal, spellbook, wand, arcane staff, harp, bushcraft, etc.

Attempting to use specialized items or knowledge always requires a specialized Skill, such as “greatsword”, “herbal medicine”, or a magic school. Characters can only start with one specialized Skill.

Names

New characters are novices without any experience or valiant deeds. If they accomplish these in play they can earn Names for themselves.

Songs

Characters can learn Songs (including stories, poems, etc) to inspire hearts and make the journey better. A new character may optionally swap one Skill for one Song.

Example Characters

Choose or roll d66, or mix n' match parts. The format is Alias: Traits | Skills, with Songs in quotes.

1.1 Rook: agile cunning | knife, (lockpicks)

1.2 Cipher: calculating elusive | ciphers, daggers

1.3 Shadow: silent (ruthless) | blowgun, poisons

1.4 Wilde: charming strong | cards, cutlass

1.5 Lyra: nimble (spy) | rope, spy ciphers

1.6 Pearl: deadly noble | disguise kit,
(stiletto)

2.6 Shiro: honorable lethal | katana, wakizashi

3.1 Drake: weathered wanderer | machete,
tinderbox

3.2 Slate: observant scout | telescope, bow

3.3 Wolf: (feral) hunter | spear, "Song of the Wild"

3.4 Hawk: vigilant scout | longbow,
falconry-glove

3.5 Storm: impetuous, daring | javelin, grapnel

3.6 Echo: hallow elf | harp | "Elven Ballad of Hope"

4.1 Kat: lithe second-story-thief | (grappling hook, thieves tools)

4.2 Forge: steadfast armorer | armor, hammer

4.3 Quill: meticulous learned | ledger, inkwell

4.4 Flint: steely dwarf | axe, cookpot

6.4 Digs: dwarf prospector | pickaxe, mining helmet

6.5 Bear: strong warrior | maul, bearskin cloak

6.6 Thalia: keen-eyed elf | bow, sword

The Muster

Ok boys, check your kit, check your weapons, it's today. You get a pint and a chaser, no more. Let's go.

During the Muster, each player takes on the role of one character adventuring today. The Guide provides new characters with 1-4 basic "hand me down" items.

Hearts

Players roll 2d6 Hearts for each of their three characters, and choose one who answers the Muster and will be played today.

10 Item Slots

Each character has 10 Item Slots to hold gear they have "equipped" and can access and use easily.

Each slot can hold one small item (cloak, flask, tinderbox, flask, 1 day rations, torch, coin purse, arrow quiver, lockpicks) or a bundle of tiny identical items (bowstrings, gems).

Larger items use 1-4 Item Slots:

- ❖ Weapons: dagger 1, sword 2, halberd 3, pike 4
- ❖ Bows: arrow quiver 1, bow 2, crossbow 3, arbalest 4
- ❖ Shields: buckler 1, heater 2, round shield 3, tower shield 4
- ❖ Armor: gauntlets 1, helm 2, gambeson 3, haubergeon 4
- ❖ Musical Instrument: pipe 1, lute 2, guitar 3, war drums 4

Baggage

Characters can carry gear outside of their 10 Item Slots but must keep a separate list called "Baggage" (big bags or rucksacks). Accessing an item from Baggage takes d6 Turns. Baggage halves movement and causes safety issues when swimming, leaping, climbing, etc.

Home Base

The characters are part of an "adventuring party" with a "home base". Party Level adds to Hearts when Mustering from "home base", but it starts at level zero. They might be an adventurers guild, warband, canting crew, etc. Their base could be a tavern, flat house, hideout, etc.

Camping

In Wândyr, each game starts with a Muster and ends in Camp. When the adventuring party decides to stop and rest, they must choose whether to make a temporary camp or return home.

Downtime

Camping is downtime. Each character exits play until the next time they Muster. The game is essentially “paused”, allowing the players and Guide to openly and rapidly discuss topics that might be more difficult to do when actively playing a character. For example, at this time the Guide awards XP and players can spend XP. The party may also fast-forward in time.

Comforts

The comforts of home are cheerful companions. A wheel of cheese, a crusty bread, mead, wine, or a good smoke can make even the most dismal dungeon feel fine.

A character who consumes a Comfort during Muster receives up to 2 extra Hearts. A 1-Heart comfort is 10 gp and uses 1 slot; a 2-Heart is 100 gp and 2 slots. Comforts are available in taverns, inns, and provisioners.

Advancement

New characters are unproven, untested novices with no prior experience, heroic deeds. All this must develop during the game.

Earning Experience

Experience Points (XP) are the measure of successful adventures. Characters can earn 1-6 XP for following their selected rumor to its full conclusion. They can also earn 1 XP by discovering an important new location or magical feature, map a new region, or rescue captives.

Slaying monsters and looting treasure never directly earns XP.

Earning Traits

A character can earn a new Trait in camp by paying XP equal to the current number of Traits. The 3rd Trait is 3 xp.

Earning Skills

A character can earn a new Skill in camp by paying XP equal to the current number of Skills..

Earning Names

A character can earn a new Name in Camp by paying 1 XP. However, the character must first have accomplished a significant deed during play. The player records the Name as a personal byname, or on a list of Names (of songs, stories, spells, etc.), or alternatively Names an item (see Named Items).

Using Names

Names are helpful for Insight and may influence NPCs. The character can also spend at least 1 Heart to reenact the heroic feat where they earned the Name.

Named Items

A Named Item has at least one Name (and at most one per item slot). If kept equipped at all times, the character may use each Name once per Muster, at no Hearts cost. Characters may hire an artisan to inscribe items with their Names and decorations (inlays, etchings, gems, gold leaf, etc.), creating a legacy.

Party Level

The adventuring party has a Party Level, which starts at zero but can grow over time. Party Level grants extra Hearts when mustering from "home base" and is used by the Guide to set the Oracle target.

Characters can advance their Party Level to Level 1 by paying 2,000 gp; the cost doubles for each Level.

The gold is presumed spent on improvements to "home base", hiring trainers, throwing parties, etc.

Game Play

The game mostly consists of a conversation around the table, where people take turns to ask questions and attempt actions.

Facts

When a player asks a question about a fact yet unknown, the Guide asks the Oracle for truth:

- "Is this town on a waterway?"
- "Is there a trail in the woods?"
- "Do they seem friendly?"

Actions

When a player takes an action, they ask the Oracle for the result:

- "I flee and climb a tree!"
- "I throw my spear"
- "I parry with my shield!"

Conversations may resemble a game of "20 questions"; the answer will be a surprise to everyone.

Ask the Oracle

Speak a question such as "does my spear hit the foe?" and roll 2d6: if the total is 8 or higher the answer is "Yes", otherwise "No".

Advantage/Disadvantage

With Advantage, roll 3d6 and keep the two best dice; on Disadvantage roll 3d6 and keep the two worst.

Never remove a 1 from the roll (e.g. 1, 1, 6 = 8 and 1, 6, 6 = 13).

A character can have Advantage with clever planning or Insight.

Disadvantages may apply for poor positioning, unarmed, in bad terrain, poor visibility, using a bow in close combat, etc. Advantage cancels Disadvantage, simply roll 2d6.

Easy / Hard

The Guide sets the Oracle target number as easy (6), normal (8), hard (10), or extreme (12). When possible, the Guide should compare Party Level with the Level of an opponent, monster, or challenge.

Sweet and Spicy

When any die rolls a 6, the outcome is "Sweet," adding a stylistic flair. Double 6s indicate a bonus or benefit. Conversely, if any die rolls a 1, the outcome is "Spicy," also adding style. Double 1s signify a penalty or complication.

Example: Bowman snipes a sentry. A "spicy" result might mean another guard notices, while a "sweet" result could mean the guard's uniform is spotless.

The Guide can either describe these effects or allow the player to provide their own interpretation. Unless the side effect is straightforward and very minor, ask the Oracle if it happens. Players must spend a Heart to request a heroic stunt or a magical effect.

Time

Most of the game is a loose conversation between the players.

The Guide tracks 10-minute "Turns" using the "Turn Clock". This is a glass or metal bowl in the middle of the table. The Guide loudly tosses a die into the clock each time the players do something time-consuming. When the bowl has six dice the Guide empties it and rolls the dice, looking for 1's, which indicate a complication of some kind. The Guide also rolls the Turn Clock whenever the players do something reckless..

The Turn Clock is just for slow-time, so it is paused during fast-paced situations such as combat.

Music

Music is important because it makes everything better. A character can perform once per Muster for each music instrument Skill and song Name. A performance takes at least 10 minutes and can influence NPC reactions or raise party morale. Each performance reaches an audience size up to the total of the Name level, Skill level, and instrument slots. Quality instruments may have a “plus” bonus such as a “guitar +1”. If the Oracle agrees, each person in the audience is restored 1 Heart, not to exceed Hearts at Muster. The Guide may allow higher level or group performances to restore 2 Hearts.

Magic

Wândyr is full of magic, and much of the game is about exploring and meddling with magical secrets.

All magic in Wândyr involves True Names, either written or spoken as words of power. A True Name can provide a magic enhancement to an item, a sorcery to bind a spirit into a “sentient” item, a sigil for a magic-user spell, and much more.

All magic items and magical objects bear mystical inscriptions: sharp dwarven runes, flowing elven script, or shifting arcane glyphs, only decipherable by magic-users.

Magic Items

Most magic items function as their mundane counterparts plus a magical enhancement. Elven boots silence footsteps, a hero's belt bestows strength, and a “shield +1” is extra protective. This often grants a Trait or Skill. Anyone with an appropriate Skill may discover their function through use (i.e. the qualities may be overlooked by the unskilled) and some items even require a Skill.

Spellbooks and Arcana are only usable by magic-users.

Sentient Items

Sentient items contain a bound soul of a magic-user, elemental, d'jinn, ifr'it, kha'din, dragon, eldar, deep one, or other entity. Bound spirits are notoriously capricious, jealous, and unhinged from confinement, their original dreams and ambitions maybe twisted by madness.

Sentient items are temperamental; when a character first attempts to use one, ask the Oracle if the item accepts them. On Sweet or Spicy, the item also talks to them!

A character who carries a sentient item grows in alignment and may discover deeper mysteries. They might take a personal Name such as "Wielder of Duskbringer". It's petty, but they hate anyone who offends their fragile egos, such as carrying them after being rejected, refusing to follow their agenda, abandoning, or "cheating" on them with a rival item.

Magic-Users

Magic is classified by "school", such as Vitae (life), Elemental, Thaumaturgy (control), Illusione (illusions & mental), Umbrakala (shadows & gates), or Necromantia.

A character with a Trait for a Magic School is a "magic-user" and literate in the magic language of that school. All words are magical to a degree, and true magic is formed by words, runes, glyphs, or arcane script.

Spellbooks are items that use one slot and contain a single spell.

Spell Casting

Casting a spell requires a Spellbook and at least one free hand. The caster must say the magic power words loudly and precisely.

Casting a spell costs 1 Heart for a normal 1st level spell. A Magic Component reduces the cost by 1 Heart per item slot consumed.

Magic components can be found in strange magical places

Magic Oracle

Ask the Oracle if a spellcasting matches the magic-user's intention.

On "NO" something unintended happens (Sweet is close but flawed and Spicy is wildly different or dangerous). Ask the Oracle a question about what happened, and add to Lore. To reiterate, a "NO" is NOT a failure, it instead means the magic did not match the caster's intention.

Spell Duration

Instant spells use one Action and are one-shot, instantaneous effects.

Active spells do not start instantaneously, but last for the current scene (e.g. a combat encounter or cutscene).

Learning Spells

A magic-user can learn a new spell from a spellbook after casting it with Sweet and paying 1 XP. They gain the spell as a Name and no longer need the book. The spell vanishes from the book.

The magic-user may alternatively choose to enchant the spell Name into an item, creating an Arcana.

Arcana

An Arcana is an item with one or more True Names of spell written on it. Arcana can be any kind of item (even tattoos) and have magic-user "drip" based on their spell Names.

If kept equipped at all times, a magic-user can use each Name in an Arcana once per Muster, at no Hearts cost if the Arcana and magic effect are ostentatiously visible.

If a weapon is an Arcana the magic-user can cast one of its spells on a "hit" instead of damage.

Invocations

Otherworldly beings can be called on by speaking their True Names.

Lore

Randomly generate new names. Players may ask the Oracle "have we heard of this being before?", "is this being aligned with Law?", etc. Anything learned becomes part of the known Lore of the being.

Invocations

A character can make an Invocation by loudly and formally calling the True Name of the being thrice and stating a request. The player asks the Oracle if they feel the being notices the request (on Sweet the being likes the request and on Spicy they dislike it).

If the being notices the request, the Guide follows existing Lore and asks the Oracle what the being does, if anything, and when, how, etc. The personality of the being and alignment of the character to the being matter a great deal.

Alignment

Upon making an Invocation, the character loses d6 Hearts and XP. The being spends the XP to bring the character further into alignment with them (ask the Oracle what happens).

Relics

Relics are sacred objects that serve as conduits to otherworldly beings. They can have Names, and speaking a Name with correct alignment activates a sacred power (once per Muster per Name, as with other Named items). Similar to a sentient item, the being might also speak a Name. These Names are often oral tradition rather than written on the item, so a character may need to learn Lore about the being to discover the Names.

Monsters

Each monster (or trap, etc.) has a Level comparable to Party Level. The Oracle is "hard" if this is higher than Party Level; or "easy" if lower.

Level 0: giant rat, vermin, goblin
Level 1: orc, skeleton, deathskito
Level 2: zombie, ghoul, giant ant, slime
Level 3: wight, harpy, giant spider
Level 4: werewolf, ogre, huge slime
Level 5: mummy, minotaur, owlbeast
Level 6: troll, wyvern, spectre, mantichore
Level 7: griffon, djinni, vampire
Level 9: chimera, giant
Level 10: golem, dragon

For more detail, the Guide can use OSR monsters or wing it as follows.

Weak pack/tribal monsters have d6 Hearts; leaders 2d6. A solitary "apex predator" monster has 2d6 or 3d6 Hearts per HD, multiple attacks, plus a deadly attack of 2d6 or 3d6, or d6 Hearts per Turn for HD+2 Turns (for paralysis, poison, petrification, etc).

Fighting

In each Turn, a character can Move and Attack (or take another action).

Move

A character can stand up OR move 40' (40 feet). Each impediment (e.g. Baggage, readying weapons, bad terrain, darkness) cuts this in half.

Attack

When a character attacks, ask the Oracle if they "hit". Each "hit" deals d6 Hearts. More lethal weapons may have a "plus" bonus, e.g. "greatsword +1". Attackers are open to counterattacks.

Defend

When a character is attacked or otherwise endangered, ask the Oracle if they avoid getting "hit". Armor and shields give 1 "iron" Heart per item slot, usable only against weapons. More protective armor may have a "plus" bonus, such as "shield +1".

When two opponents attempt melee attacks against each other, reduce hits to each other by 1 Heart.

Initiative

The Guide determines Turn order based on the situation, e.g. characters near the front of the party might be called before those in the rear, or characters who need to move to see what is happening.

Melee attacks go first and are usually simultaneous. However, when enemies approach from a distance, the weapon with the better reach (by item slots) has the "right of way" to attack first. Conversely, in close quarters combat (less than 10 feet of fighting space per person) the smaller weapon attacks first.

Hearts

Hearts act as plot armor; a character is not injured while they have Hearts. A character at 0 Hearts is injured but can recover in Camp. A character below 0 Hearts is dying and needs magic healing; when the Turn Clock clears, anyone below 0 Hearts immediately dies.

Saving Throws

When someone is exposed to a special effect (poison, petrification, breath, magic, paralyzation, etc.), ask the Oracle if they somehow avoid the "worst half" of the effect. On YES they take half the effect.

The Oracle

Ask a question and roll 2d6: if the total is 8 or higher the answer is "Yes", otherwise "No".

Always phrase the question for yes/no where the characters want to hear "Yes":

- "Do we find shelter?"
- "Is the sword magical?"
- "Do I hit the monster?"
- "Do I avoid the trap?"

Sweet & Spicy

When any die rolls a 6, the outcome is "Sweet," adding a stylistic flair. Double 6s indicate a bonus or benefit. Conversely, if any die rolls a 1, the outcome is "Spicy," also adding style. Double 1s signify a penalty or complication.

Insight

Insight is an opportunity to claim advantage. Players who follow Insight on a roll have Advantage. Roll d6 for Insight each Turn.

1 - TRAIT

The player described their approach to the roll according to their Traits.

2 - SKILL

Use a helpful item Skill; requires the item.

3 - ITEM

Use a helpful item. (Special items require a specialized item Skill, e.g. longbow, lockpicks, greatsword, spellbooks, wand, etc.)

4 - NAME

Use a relevant Name (byname, title, named item, spell). "Dragon Slayer" helps with dragon stuff.

5 - SONG

Use a Song (or story, poem, etc.) helpful for the action or morale.

6 - EFFORT

Apply more effort. Thus, not possible if carrying Baggage, making something look easy, maintaining stealth or subtlety, climbing, swimming, wrestling, etc.
